The Circus

Soon after midnight, people, circus crazy, began to make their way to the North Side depot to witness the arrival of the Barnum & Bailey circus trains. About a hundred boys and young men slept under the trees in that viciniiy. Girls made appointments to meet the certain localities at half pass three this morning and go in squads to see the trains unload. Business men crossed the bridge hours before daylight, and before the trains arrived 1500 people big and little were awaiting their arrival. The three trains came down the Central track between three and four o'clock this morning, about half an hour apart, and passed over the bridge to the South Side depot; then subsequently re-crossed, about daylight and unloaded near the exhibition ground at Pleasure Park. At an early hour this morning the streets were filled, and long before 9 o'clock, the advertised hour of the parade, the public thoroughfares along the line of march were densely packed, not only the sidewalks, but in some cases ten feet into the roadway on either side, while every window of the buildings was crowded full of anxious faces. The crowd waited for fully an hour beyond the appointed time for the procession: but many felt amply repaid for their tedious and wearisome waiting in the hot sun, when the procession appeared, certainly the longest and most finely caparisoned ever seen in Dixon. The parade gave promise, amply fulfilled this afternoon, of the biggest show that travels. Its only fault is its immensity. It is simply impossible for a spectator to take in a tenth of the wonderful performances that are simultaneously going on in three rings, the water pool, the stages and trapeses. No such exhibition for completeness and excellence has ever before appeared in this city. The nationalities represented remind one of the famed Midway Plaisance; and the collection of animals is very complete and interesting, including the droves of camels and performing elephants. The managers every year spend immense fortunes in the introduction of new features and rare curiosities. Go tonight and see more that is rare and curious and worth seeing than in all the other traveling shows combined.

Clears-Blackburn Wedding

Last evening St. Ptrick's church was the scene of an occasion of unmingled pleasure in the wedding of Alfred T. Clears to Miss Cathryn Blackburn, daughter of Mrs. Wm. Clancy, residing north of this city. The wedding was a very quiet affair, only relatives and a very few intimate friends being present. Precisely at 6:45 the bridal party entered the church to the sweet strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, struck from the keys of the pipe organ by Miss Bresnahan Miss Sheridan, of Freeport, acted as bridesmaid and S. B. Clears, brother of the groom, as best man. The bride and bridesmaid were attired in white silk trimmed with pearl passementric and carrying white carations; the only ornament worn by the bride was a beautiful pin, the gift of the groom. The impressive marriage ceremony was read by Rev. Father Foley.

After the ceromeney a reception was given at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. O'Connell, to the relatives and a few inmate friends. The house was beautifully decorated with smilax and white carnations. Mr. and Mrs. Clears received congratulations under the cannopy of white flowers. The guests then partook of a repast in the dining-room. Mr. Clears is the oldest son of our citizen J. B. Clears of this city. The bride is a well known and highly accomplished young lady. The large number of handsome presents which adorn their new house at 502 Peoria avenue testify of the high esteem in which the happy couple were held by their many friends.

BURROWS' POSITION.

THE MICHIGAN SENATOR ARGUES AGAINST FREE COINAGE.

It Would Expel Our Gold and Gold Paper and Cause a Disastrous Panic—Result of Having Two Dollars of Different Values—Evils of a Silver Basis.

In an address, delivered at Bay View, Mich., Senator Burrows of Michigan rigorously opposed the free coinage fallacy and upheld our present financial system. After reviewing our monetary legislation he said:

"In the first place the free and unlimited coinage of silver at 16 to 1 would in my judgment expel from our circulation not only our entire volume of gold, but every dollar of paper money redeemable in gold, and cause a contraction of the currency and a resultant panic the like of which has not been seen in this generation.

"This would follow as the inevitable result of that law of monetary science which where two moneys are issued of unequal value the cheaper will always expel the dearer from circulation. It certainly needs no argument to demonstrate the truth of the proposition that if two dollars are issued, one worth 50 cents and the other 100 cents, the 50 cent dollar will be the only dollar in circulation and the 100 cent dollar will be hoarded by the banks and individuals until the whole volume of such currency entirely disappears. This law is of universal application and has its origin in human nature itself. No debtor owing $100 would discharge that indebtedness in the more valuable of two moneys. He would surely make use of the cheaper and retain the dearer. It was the knowledge of this law that guided the fathers in fixing the ratio in the beginning at 15 to 1.

"They knew that dollars of unequal commercial value could not be made to circulate permanently side by side, and so, having ascertained that 24¾ grains of pure gold were of equal value with 371¼ grains of pure silver, they provided for the coinage of these two metals into dollars at the ration of 15 to 1. But the truth of this principle has been demonstrated over and over again even in our own history. The gold and silver coins issued at the ratio of 15 to 1 under the act of 1792 shortly became of unequal commercial value, the bullion in the gold dollar being of greater value than the bullion in the silver dollar. The silver dollar became cheaper than the gold dollar, and the consequence was that silver alone circulated and gold gradually disappeared. Indeed, and for the same reason, the coinage of gold declined, for the 24¾ grains of pure gold provided for in the gold dollar were worth more uncoined than when coined, and therefore its coinage naturally ceased, and silver bullion alone found its way to the mints of the United States.

"It remains only to be inquired what would be the probable effect of adopting the silver dollar of 371½ grains as our single standard of value. The first and most patent result, as already noticed, would be to drive from our circulation every other dollar of superior value, whether of coin or paper. Our $600,000,000 of gold, constituting one-third of the entire volume of our money, would be quickly eliminated from our circulation by being hoarded or sent abroad, followed by the retirement of our $400,000,000 of paper currency redeemable in gold, producing a contraction of the currency, unexampled in our history, of over $1,000,000,000, to be followed by a financial convulsion unprecedented in modern times. It will not do to say that with free and unlimited coinage this vacuum would be quickly supplied, for it would require 25 years, with the present capacity of our mints, to replace this vast volume of currency with silver.

"This consideration alone ought to be sufficient to deter us from venturing upon such a hazardous policy. More than this. The silver dollar of 371½ grains produced under free coinage and not maintained at a parity with the gold dollar, as it surely would not be, would, as we have seen, at once sink to the level of its bullion value and be worth only about 50 cents. Every depositor in savings, national and state banks, the holders of policies in life, fire and all other insurance companies, investments in loan and building associations, represented by a great body of people numbering more than 20,000,000, would be forced to receive in return for their deposits, premiums and investments a dollar of only one-half the value of that with which they parted, to the enormous and incalculable advantage of these great corporations. Suppose an importer of foreign goods should become indebted to the government of the United States in the sum of $10,000 for customs dues, what would prevent him from purchasing $5,000 of silver bullion and under free coinage converting it into 10,000 silver dollars, and with these liquidate the indebtedness to the government? Every pensioner would find his meager stipend lessened one-half, and many of them would be reduced to beggary. Not only this, but all the recipients of fixed salaries, every clerk, teacher, railway employee and receiver of a stated income would be forced to take a money which in procuring the necessities of life for himself and family would possess only one-half of its former purchasing power, for it must be remembered the price of everything would advance as the value of our money declined. But it would be an endless task to attempt to catalogue the disaster which such a step would be sure to entail."

A Silver Monomaniac.

They say a fellow in Henry county, Mo., is so cranky on the silver question that he digs up all the goldenrods and marigolds, raises white corn and won't speak to his wife because she has golden hair, is forever denouncing the gold cure, won't keep the golden rule and doesn't want to enter the golden gates. —Evanston (Wy.) [Communicated.]

Washington D. C., Correspondence.

Secretary Lamont has returned to the Capital.

Grover Cleveland is expected soon from Gray Gables at Buzzard's Bay. The foreign legations have been anxious for some time for the return of the President, French and Spanish diplomatic questions needing immediate attention.

Congress sits December 1st and will continue nine months or more. Last year only three months sessions were held.

The political outlook here is that Grover Cleveland will be the next Democratic nominee for President and that the Republican plum will fall to either McKinley, Reed, or Allison.

A prominent Democratic banker here today expressed his desire for a change of administration, giving as his reasons that his bank was full of money which nobody wanted because the outlook was so gloomy no one would invest in business ventures and that many of the business men of Washington had been away to the mountains all summer owing to dull trade here. He also added that he was by no means the only good democrat holding the same views

A Business Opportunity

With the opening of their busy season, commencing as it does with the autumn, the Garment Cutter Co. find themselves short of help to introduce their work to the public in the large territory where it is practically unknown and for this purpose they are willing to train those who desire to get into a business that combines pleasure and profit with permanence. That the cutter is a seller has been shown by the results of work done during the heated term when most people are preparing to enjoy a vacation and when it requires unusual effort to interest them in anything that requires a certain amount of study or that savors of work.

That the work can be introduced by those who have had but little previous experience as salesmen or solicitors is shown by the fact that the large class in Dixon is the result of work done by those who had their first experience as canvassers while here.

This demonstrates that previous experience is not necessary and as a matter of fact the Company have found that inexperienced help are capable of taking a course of training better than those who having a preconceived idea that they know it all and thus are beyond the reach of criticism as to methods of work.

The company will shortly open their training school in Dixon and in the meantime invite an inspection of their plan of work from those who are out of employment or from those who desire to better their condition, as there are plenty of people who are wasting their time, energy and talent in humdrum work that gives them little more than a living at the end of the year, and that ties them down to one spot without a chance to see the world or bring out and develop their talents. By learning the garment cutter and starting out of the old rut they are enabled to get an education of a practical nature that will benefit them more than a course in college. The opportunity to travel about the country to meet all kinds of people, to get the benefit of change of scene and climate will prove of value to a large class of persons who need a change of this kind who will be enabled to do this and at the same time earn money more easily than they ever have. For a short time there will be a chance to investigate while the preparations for the fall campaign are being matured and before the pressure of retail work takes up the whole time of the local manager, who can be found at the office of the company at Room 16 over Countryman's store. Office hours are from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m.

"COMRADES ALL" AT CHATTANOOGA

Blue and Gray Shake Hands, Sectionalism Vanishes and the American Millennium Is Accomplished—Sketches of Dedicatory Exercises on Chattanooga Field—Extract from Gov. Altgeld's Remarks—Lesson of the War and of the Monuments.

CHATTANOOGA, Sept. 19.—If one may judge by the events of the last ten days, Mason's and Dixon's line has been wiped off the map. The friendly, brotherly, feeling that has been displayed here this week and that was shown at Louisville last week by the boys of the gray toward the boys of the blue, show that the bitter sectionalism that has so long divided the union no longer exists. For nearly a fortnight now the doors of the south have been thrown open to the men who came here thirty odd years ago bearing arms of slaughter and destruction. Not a single incident that would indicate a feeling of hatred on either side has been recorded. "Yankees" and "Johnny Rebs" grown gray with years have gone over the great battlefield together, discussed the events of those awful days, drank together and even in some instances, slept together, without stirring up anything like an angry thought.

The Boys Are Fraternizing.

Generals who commanded armies for the Union have been guests of the generals of the Confederacy and each has solemnly declared that there is "no north and no south." "The events of today have bound us together as nothing else could have done, and the solemn yet joyous event of tomorrow will seal the tie for ever." So spoke a venerable soldier of the north to one of the south at Snodgrass Hill, and the latter replied with tears in his eyes: "Comrade, you are right. Shake hands." And they did. Chattanooga's people are doing as much for the entertainment of their northern visitors as any one could wish.

Dedicated to the Living, Not the Dead.

Yesterday was devoted to the dedication of the monuments marking the positions in the field. At the Illinois dedication Governor Altgeld was the principal speaker and in the course of his remarks he said: "You observe we are marking positions, we are celebrating actions, we are pointing to what the living did; we are not building tombs, we are not decorating graves, for not very many of our heroes are buried here. * * * 'Tis not their graves, 'tis their deeds that live. Men look toward the firmament for the names of the heroes and rarely ask where their bones are buried. Standing on the shores of the Mediterranean more than 2,000 years ago the great Pericles, while pronouncing a funeral oration over the Greeks who had fallen in defense of their country, said: 'The world is their sepulcher, and wherever there is speech of noble deeds there they will be remembered.' So with our heroes.

The Lesson of the Monuments.

"There have been thousands of battles of which the actors were forgotten almost as soon as the groans of the dying had ceased because there was no principle involved; it was simply human butchery. But not so with the battles of this war. Here was hanging in the balance the very existence of republican institutions among men, and the liberty of millions of human beings yet unborn. Never before was there such an issue; and when the smoke of war had cleared away, when the sun again arose over a peaceful land, the world beheld * * * that the battles and horrors of the war had been the birthpains of a new era, with which time had been pregnant; that they were hammers in the great clock of omnipotence pealing through the universe the dawn of a new day for millions of the human race. That in brief is the sublime, the imperishable story which these monuments tell."

At Other Similar Exercises.

At half a dozen places on the field similar exercises were in progress. Michigan had led off, as a matter of fact, her state commission occupying for that purpose the platform on Snodgrass Hill, on which the general dedication exercises will take place today. The monuments and markers erected upon the battlefields of Chickamauga, Chattanooga, Missionary Ridge and Orchard Knob were presented to Governor Rich by Captain ex-Congressman C. E. Belknap, president of the state park commission. After Governor Rich had accepted the monuments on behalf of the state, General Henry M. Duffield, of Detroit, who commanded the Ninth regiment in the war, delivered an eloquent oration. The monuments were then turned over to General Fullerton.

BUCKEYE AND HOOSIER STATES.

Distinguished Men Gather to Take Part in the Ceremonies.

The Ohio dedication was under direction of General John Beatty, president of the board of commissioners. This was the most elaborate and notable event of the day. Bishop Joyce, of the Methodist church, offered prayer, and addresses were made by General Charles H. Grosvenor, ex-Governor James E. Campbell, General Aquilla Wiley, who turned the monuments over to Governor McKinley, and he in turn to General Fullerton. Members and officers of the state commission also spoke. Governor Campbell's address was largely a eulogy upon General Ferd Vandeveer, a fellow townrman, who took an active part in the battle.

A distinguished gathering marked the dedication of the Indiana monuments at the camp established near Cave Springs. Besides Governor Claude Matthews, the occasion presented as speakers the soldier author, General Lew Wallace; Colonel I. N. Walker, the newly-elected grand commander, G. A. R.; General J. R. Carnahan, and Judge D. B. McConwell, of the Ninth Indiana infantry. Kelly's field was occupied by the Wisconsin people. Near it stands the monument erected to the First regiment of that state. The Rev. Jackson E. Webster, chaplain of the Tenth Wisconsin, opened with prayer. Addresses were made by Governor W. H. Upham, ex-Governer Hoard, W. W. Watkins, chairman of the state board, and others.

Massachusetts monuments were dedicated at Knob Hill at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The ceremonies were short, simple and impressive. Governor Greenhalge called the assembly to order and made the address of the occassion. He briefly reviewed the part that Massachusetts took in the awful battle and then of the part she took in the great rebellion. In conclusion he spoke of the dedication of the field as a national park in honor of the heroes who fell there. At the conclusion of his speech the governor and his staff, together with the state commission, went to the National cemetery and decorated the graves of the Massachusetts soldiers buried there.

GREAT GATHERING AT NIGHT.

One of Barnum's Three-Ring Circus Tents Crowded With Veterans.

It is doubtful if P. T. Barnum in his palmiest days ever saw such a crowd at his circus as assembled beneath one of his old three-ringed tents in this city last night. The occasion for this great gathering was the reunion of the Society of the Army of the Cumberland. A large number of veterans belonging to the Society of the Army of the Tennessee, who came here from Cincinnati, were present as guests. The Veteran General J. D. Morgan, from Quincy, Ill, vice president of the society, and who is now past 80 years of age, presided in the absence of General Rosecrans.

When the meeting had been called to order General Morgan introduced Mayor George W. Ochs, who made the address of welcome. Response was made by General H. V. Boynton, secretary of the association. Following General Boynton, General Morgan made an address of welcome to the Confederate veterans, after which Senator Charles Manderson, of Nebraska, delivered the annual address to the society. He closed as follows: "My comrades and my companions, have no fear for the republic. It is based on man's love of liberty; its structure bedded on equal rights to all, and cemented by the blood of our slain. Let the pessimist feel disturbed, false prophets scent danger in the signs of the times and give forth forebodings of evil to come. Be not dismayed. This government of the people, by the people and for the people shall not perish from the earth."

PILLSBURY'S OBJECT LESSON.

He Is Discussing Wages with His Employes When the Statisticians Call.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 19.—The labor statisticians were given an unexpected object lesson in the settlement of a labor difficulty between the largest flour milling company in the country and a delegation of its employes. The commissioners had been invited to the general offices of the Pillsbury-Washburn Flour Mill company to look into its business methods. At the moment of their visit Charles A. Pillsbury, the managing director, was having a conference with a delegation of employes who asked for a restoration of wages.

Pillsbury asked his visitors to listen to the discussion, an invitation they gladly accepted. Statements of both sides were made, Pillsbury showing that the milling business had been without profit for four years, and the men replying that it was profitable now. The reduction of 20 per cent. in wages still stands and they want it removed. After the discussion had progressed for some time Pillsbury turned to the commissioners and asked for their opinions.

Commissioner Powers, of Minnesota, diplomatically parried this query by pointing out that it would be manifestly improper to express an opinion. But the commissioners listened to the discussion, which was very friendly in tone, with evident interest.

STATUTE OR NO STATUTE,

The Texan Governor Is Going to Stop the Corbett-Fitzsimmons Fight.

AUSTIN, Sept. 19.—Governor Culberson was seen in reference to Judge Hart's opinion at Dallas favorable to prize fighting. He refused to express himself, but it is evident that he will ignore the opinion and prevent the fight. To be prepared for an adverse opinion he has been looking up Governor Ross' action on the Sullivan-Kilrain fight, which he prevented from coming off in Texas. Ross' order to the sheriff cites the laws still in force and commands him to enforce them.

Governor Culberson had several copies of the order made and it is certain he proposes to prevent the fight. Texas has a ranger force controlled and governed by special laws, and they can be ordered anywhere in the state by the governor without military red-tape regulations, and their special province is to prevent infraction of laws. Culberson will probably use this force. Culberson's action unmistakably indicated he would prevent the fight at all hazards.

Vest Still a Free Silver Man.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Senator Vest was interviewed in regard to his reported change of views on the silver question. He said: "I know absolutely nothing of the published report, and the alleged conversation never occurred. During my stay abroad no one approached me on the subject. I have not left the ranks of free coinage advocates and my adherence to the principles which I have always advocated is unchanged. I firmly believe in the full and unlimited use of silver against the single gold standard."

His Lesson Was a Costly One.

FINDLAY O., Sept. 19.—William Woodward, a wealthy and very eccentric old man living south of this city, has always believed in the honesty of his neighbors, and has never had a lock upon his doors. Some persons unknown entered his house while he and his family were asleep and found the hiding place of $600 in money, with which they made away without disturbing any one.

Scores of the Ball Players.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—Following are the scores made by League base ball clubs: At Boston—Baltimore 0, Boston 8; at Cleveland—Cincinnati 9, Cleveland 10; at Louisville—St. Louis 4, Louisville 3; (second game) St. Louis 2, Louisville 9; at Washington—Brooklyn 3, Washington 5; at Pittsburg—Chicago 5, Pittsburg 6; at New York—wet grounds.

Stricken Fatally While Speaking.

UPPER SANDUSKY, O., Sept. 19.—While Pension Attorney J. P. Dry was addressing the annual reunion of the One Hundred and Forty fourth Ohio regiment in Lambright's grove, near Nevada, his speech suddenly stopped, and he fell from the platform to the ground. He was found to be suffering from paralysis and died in a couple of hours.

Alleged Abortionists Held.

OSKALOOSA, Ia., Sept. 19.—For the alleged death by abortion of Irene Sevort, at Fremont, J. A. Gunn, a leading business man of unblemished character, and Dr. Boatman have been arrested and held in $2,000 bonds. The girl left a statement, written by another doctor, charging these men with her ruin and death.

EXPOSITION OPEN.

NEGRO ORATOR ON THE PLATFORM,

And Colored Men and Women in Carriages in the Procession—Eloquent Remarks of Booker T. Washington—"Cast Down Your Bucket Where You Are"—The Touching of the Button and Starting of the Machinery—The Grand Finale.

ATLANTA, Sept. 19.—The great Cotton States exposition is open, and opened amid scenes that are unique in this "neck 'o woods." A well-known writer once described a scene witnessed at the visitors' entrance to the British house of commons. The writer aforesaid and two traveling acquaintances, one of whom he calls "Alabama," had tried in vain to obtain tickets to the visitors' gallery of the British house, and failing had gone around to the entrance to that gallery to watch those who had been more fortunate.

"Great Scott, Alabama, Look at That."

As they stood there, among the first who came along with the coveted ticket of admission was a tall negro, coal black, escorting a pretty flaxen haired English girl. As they moved toward the entrance the writer exclaimed to his Alabama friend, "Great Scott, Alabama, look at that!" And they looked. The color line evidently did not exist in that country. In a measure the opening of the exposition here was as remarkable in respect to the color line as scene the pictured in the foregoing. The programme in the Auditorium within the exposition grounds presented the remarkable spectacle of ex-Governor Rufus B. Bullock, elected chief executive of the state by Republican votes during the reconstruction period, and now a leading citizen of Atlanta and director of the exposition, acting as master of ceremonies in introducing in succession to a southern audience, Mrs. Joseph Thompson, president of the woman's board, and Booker T. Washington, the representative of the negro race.

Words of the Negro Orator.

This incident coupled with the appearance of negroes in carriages in the parade and the presence of the Negro building on the grounds emphasized the recognition given to the race by this exposition for the first time in the history of such enterprises. And Booker T. Washington's oration was worthy of the occasion. It was delivered in faultless English, with impressiveness and eloquence, and was frequently applauded. He said in part: "No enterprise seeking the material, civil or moral welfare of this section can disregard this element of our population and reach the highest success. I but convey to you, Mr. President and directors, the sentiment of the masses of my race when I say that in no way have the value and manhood of the American negro been more fittingly and generously recognized than by the managers of this magnificent exposition at every stage of its progress.

"Cast Down Your Bucket Where You Are."

"A ship lost at sea for many days suddenly sighted a friendly vessel. From the mast of the unfortunate vessel was seen the signal, 'Water, water, we die of thirst!' The answer from the friendly vessel at once came back, 'Cast down your bucket where you are.' A second time the signal, 'Water, water, send us water,' ran up from the distressed vessel, and was answered, 'Cast down your bucket where you are.' The captain of the distressed vessel at last heeding the injunction, cast down his bucket and it came up full of fresh, sparkling water from the mouth of the Amazon river. To those of my race who depend on bettering their condition in a foreign land, or who underestimate the importance of cultivating friendly relations with the southern white man who is their next door neighbor, I would say, Cast down your bucket where you are—cast it down in making friends in every manly way of the people of all races by whom we are surrounded. Cast it down in agriculture, in mechanics, in commerce, in domestic service and in the professions.

Same Advice to the Whites.

"To those of the white race who look to the incoming of those of foreign birth and strange tongues and habits for the prosperity of the south, were I permitted, I would repeat what I say to my own race: 'Cast down your bucket where you are.' Cast it down among 8,000,000 negroes whose habits you know, whose loyalty and love you have tested in days when to have proved treacherous meant ruin of your firesides. Cast down your bucket among these people who have without strikes and labor wars tilled your fields, cleared your forests, builded your railroads and cities and brought forth treasures from the bowels of the earth and helped make possible this magnificent representation of the progress of the south.

His Promise for His People.

"Casting down your bucket among my people, helping and encouraging them as you are doing on these grounds, and to education of head, hand and heart, you will find that they will buy your surplus land, make blossom the waste places in your fields and run your factories. While doing this you can be sure in the future, as you have been in the past, that you and your families will be surrounded by the most patient, faithful, law-abiding and unresentful people that the world has ever seen."

BUTTON WAS TOUCHED LATE.

Not Until After 4 O'clock Was Everything Ready—The Great Fountain.

The orator of the day was Judge Speer. He traced the history of the exposition, and paid an eloquent tribute to its projectors and to the influence it would have on the moral and material elements of the south. When Judge Speer concluded his oration the ceremony of touching the button took place. Wires had been stretched from Gray Gables to Buzzard's Bay and still another wire had been stretched from the Auditorium here to the Machinery building. While Judge Speer was delivering his address the operator cleared the line to Gray Gables and shortly after 6 o'clock everything was ready.

Herbert's band played a selection and suddenly a flash of light from an electric lamp illuminated the buildings. There were great cheers. The exposition was formally opened. Down at Machinery Hall Engineer Charles S. Foster had attached two electric valves to the Frick engine and the 4,000,000 gallon pump. When President Cleveland touched the button the electricity opened a small valve which forced a jet of steam against a larger one, and this opening the steam was admitted to the cylinders. Mr. Foster was sitting by the big engine waiting for the signal from the president.

He held his head close to the electric valve for a half hour. When the valve clicked and the hissing steam poured into the cylinder he waved his hand to the engineers around him and at once all the engines were opened. The wheels began turning and the ponderous machine announced the opening of the great show. Standing on the banks of Lake Clara Meer Luther Steininger directed the operations of the fountain, the greatest electrical creation in the history of the world. The single jet from the center of the machine suddenly began shooting and as it rose above the banks of the lake the men at Paine's fireworks building began a salute of 100 bombs.

The first bomb, thrown high into the air, notified the crowds around the ground that the exposition had really started and great cheers rent the air. This closed the regular programme, and the great crowd distributed itself over the grounds and the buildings for a first peep at the big fair whose formal inauguration they had just witnessed. The opening was a complete and unequivocal success, and the exposition begins with every good omen in its favor.

The Arion Glee club sang a song when Senator Manderson had finished and then Hon. Hilary A. Herbert, secretary of the navy, was introduced. As the secretary came forward he was greeted with loud applause, and made a felicitous speech. Lieutenant General Schofield, General Grenville M. Dodge, General Daniel Butterfield, and General Horace Porter each in turn made a brief talk, when Secretary Herbert had finished. The meeting then adjourned.

At the Gray Gables End.

BUZZARDS BAY, Mass., Sept. 19.—The gold-rimmed button attached to a wire connecting Gray Gables, the summer residence of President Cleveland, with the motor in Machinery hall at the great Cotton States and International exposition at Atlanta, was pressed by the chief executive of the United States last evening. This act, coming at the close of an elaborate opening programme at Atlanta, was intended to furnish a fitting climax to the day's events in that city. Just before touching the button the president exchanged congratulatory messages with the exposition directors.

OSTRACISING THE SALOONIST.

Odd Fellows' Supreme Body Bars Him Out of the Order.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 19.—At the session of the sovereign grand lodge, I. O. O. F., amendments to the constitution, introduced at last year's session, came up for final action. The first amendment was the addition of another section to article 16, providing that no saloonkeepers, bartenders or professional gamblers shall be eligible to membership in the order. This immediately raised a spirited debate, which lasted for more than three hours.

The vote was finally taken amid the utmost confusion and the amendment passed by a vote of 147 to 82, the requisite number being 135. This amendment has been successively introduced at the annual sessions for four or five years past, but its supporters have never been able to pass it until this time. When this had been done the hour was so late that the second important amendment was laid over until today. This is an amendment to shut out the negro.

MOBOCRACY IS SUPREME.

One Man in Nebraska, However, Has the Grit to Defy Its Powers.

LINCOLN, Sept. 19.—According to reports from O'Neill the vigilance committee of Holt county, members of which are credited with the lynching of Barrett Scott last December, is again active and threatening vengeance on residents who denounce its methods. Last week James Binkard received a letter warning him to leave the country or suffer death. The offense committed by Binkard was denunciation of the men who murdered Barrett Scott.

He heeded the warning and went to Iowa. Several other men have received letters, but have refused to depart. Prominent among them is John Mensle. When he received his notice he quietly hitched up his team, went to O'Neill and had his life insured for the benefit of his family, and returning home he sent word to the vigilantes that he was ready to balance accounts at any time and place.

Will Vote for the New Woman.

PEORIA, Ills., Sept. 19.—Out of nearly 100 delegates to the central Illinois M. E. conference interviewed by a reporter but two or three were opposed to admitting women to the general conference. There is no doubt that the conference will vote for their admission. The delegates very generally favor the amendment abolishing the itinerary system. The Rev. H. K. Metcalf, of Bushnell, was elected secretary of the conference and the Rev. L. F. Cullom statistical secretary. S. Van Pelt, of Onarga, was elected treasurer.

Evidence in the Durrant Trial.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 19.—The principal witness to testify in the Durrant case was George King, organist of Emanuel church. He testified to Durrant being in the church about an hour after the time Mrs. Leake swore she saw Durrant and Miss Lamont enter the church; also that Durrant was pale, dishevelled and sick and complained that he had been overcome by escaping gas. Witness smelt no gas.

Woman in a Postoffice Robbery.

TRINIDAD, Colo., Sept. 19—Three men and a woman, charged with the robbery of the postoffice at Blossburg, N. M., Sept. 11, were arrested here. They are alleged to have driven from here to Blossburg, where they made a successful raid on the postoffice. They gave their names as Charles Black, Thomas Rivers, John Edwards and Louisa Vans.

Arbitrating a Scale of Prices.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 19.—Thirty delegates, representing the coal miners in St. Clair county, and ten operators representing the leading firms that handle the product of that district, are holding a meeting at East St. Louis to arbitrate the question of a uniform scale of wages to conform with the scale prior to the miners' strike of 1894.

Ezeta Goes to Make Trouble.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 19.—General Antonio Ezeta has left for Mexico on his expedition to regain control of the government of Salvador. He was accompanied only by two personal attendants.

HAD A SNAKE DINNER

THE MAJOR'S STORY OF A SPREAD, WITH RATTLER AS THE LEADER.

The Snake Tasted Like the Fried Breast of a Tender Spring Chicken, but the Novice Held His Portion Down With Frequent Drafts of Generous Wine.

Clouds of tobacco smoke filled the corner of the little up town cafe where they were telling snake stories, and the yarns that were told were decidedly thrilling. Of course they were all true. The southern man in the party, Major X., for some years past a successful lawyer in this city, had been telling about the Devil's swamp, down south, and its extraordinary number and variety of reptiles. Suddenly he asked, "Did you ever eat rattlesnake?

"Oh, you needn't laugh," he said. "I've eaten it, and it was good too. This is the way it came about: At Bay St. Louis, the place, you know, where the pugilists have in the last few years trained for their prize fights in the south, there used to live an old Frenchman named Pierrot. He came from the country back of Lyons, France, where they eat snails, frogs, and it seems, snakes as well. Pierrot was a famous hunter, and, though the deer and turkey had been driven away from the neighborhood, he was the most successful hunter of quail, squirrel, rabbit, woodcock and jacksnipe, with which the country back of the bay abounded.

"I had heard that Pierrot was a feeder on snakes and asked him about it. He admitted that he ate rattlesnake whenever he could get it, and invited me to dine with him the next time he secured a prize.

"It was about a week after that, in the middle of June, that old Pierrot informed me that he had captured a live rattler. He had pinned the snake down with a forked stick and extracted its fangs by jerking them out with a silk handkerchief, which the reptile had struck at. The snake was kept in a wooden box, and I was taken around to see it. It was a sleek, chubby looking fellow with eight rattles. We were to have the dinner next day at Burratini's. Ciracco Burratini came originally from somewhere near Naples and was as fond of snakes and snails as old Pierrot was. A fourth member of the dinner party was a Marseilles man named Bayonne, who had fed on escargots, sea spiders and things like that pretty much all his life. He was a good cook besides. So the preparation of the dinner was left to him.

"Burratini kept a saloon on the line of the Shell road, which skirts the Mississippi sound, with wide galleries running round the house. A giant live oak tree, hanging with Spanish moss, kept the spot in continual shade, and from the front yards of the houses near by floated the odors of acacias, cape jasmines and oleanders. It was in this lovely Andalusian spot, with the sea breezes floating in fresh from the gulf, that we sat on the seaward veranda to eat our feast.

"We had other things besides rattlesnake of course, but snake was served at each course after the shrimp and soup. Shrimp, you know, the small river variety, is one of the best appetizers land or water furnishes for the delectation of an educated palate. Well, we had shrimp, a rich onion soup and then a court bouillon of Spanish mackerel.

"Don't know what a court bouillon is? The fish is smothered in sherry with a sauce of finely chopped onions and garlic, parsley and spice, and it's a royal dish, I tell you. No, it's not a bouillabaisse, but if you don't like highly spiced food I wouldn't advise you to try it.

"After the court bouillon there was fillet of rattlesnake. The slices were first dipped in the beaten yolks of eggs, thinly sprinkled with finely ground cornmeal and fried in swimming oil. I forgot to say that the court bouilon was not wholly of Spanish mackerel. Snake was one of the components, and that is how I first got my taste of rattlesnake. I was not told, however, that snake was mixed with the fish.

"There was a lot of wine, of course, a good, well bodied French claret, and by the time the fillet of snake was served, I was pretty well fortified for the gastronomic ordeal. It looked nice and tempting, but I could see snakes as plainly as any old toper ever did after an unfed debauch. A generous wine, though, is a great alleviation of that sort of abhorrence, and I tackled the snake.

"Taste? As well as I can remember, it tasted like the fried breast of spring chicken, but if I hadn't kept my goblet filled, I don't know how it would have tasted. I know that I bolted the morsels and then instantly washed them down with wine to keep the thing from wriggling.

"After that we had stewed snake with mushrooms, with polenta as a side dish. The polenta was added in deference to Burratini, as most Italians of his class think a meal is incomplete without that most filling but rather vacuous of boiled grits. The snake was used up by this time, and we finished our repast with a feast of escargots, or rather sea snails.

"The snails the oystermen bring up with their tongs from the sounds and bayous tributary to the gulf are almost as palatable as the escargots imported from the south of France. Yes, I saw snakes next day, but I attributed the delusion to the wine."—New York World.

An Electrograph.

An electograph for marking linen indelibly was shown to the Royal society lately. The fabric is dampened and a current passed for two seconds from a silver die, carrying silver into the fabric wherever it touches. The current is then reversed for three seconds, reducing the metal. The result is that metallic silver is deposited on the tissue.

Startling Developments in the Inquiry Into the Charges of Solicitation Bribes by Prairie State Legislators—Witnesses Who Give Names and State Amounts Which They Were Asked to Pay for Favorable Actions by the Lawmakers.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., Sept. 19.—There were startling developments in the investigation by the grand jury of bribery in the Thirty-ninth general assembly. R. C. Grier, secretary of the Peoria Board of Trade gave the names of two members of the house warehouse committee who had offered to kill the grain inspection bill for $6,500, Peoria to give $3,500 and East St. Louis $3,000.

Bartine, of Nevada; ex-Representative Acklen, of Tennessee, and W. H. Harvey, author of "Coin," of this city, all prominent in the free silver propaganda, have been in consultation here for the last three days as the executive committee of the national Silver committee, and their consultation has resulted in a set of resolutions calling on the American Bimetallic League and the national Bimetallic Union to join with the Silver committee in calling a conference for Dec. 17, 1895, in this city to formulate a plan for a national convention to nominate candidates for president and vice president of the United States on a platform the sole plank of which is to be free silver.

It is also resolved that every member of the conference shall declare in writing his absolute advocacy of free silver above all party allegiance; also that the object of the conference shall be the inauguration of a distinctive silver movement for 1896 in time for all free silver men to unite therewith. It is also resolved that if the two organizations called upon fail to join the movement by Nov. 1 next the Silver committee president shall issue the call on behalf of that organization alone. The method of selecting delegates is to be settled by a conference of the three organizations named, each organization having equal representation.

—The vivacious Miss Soule, fertile in surprises in society circles, gave some sort of an elephantine matinee at an early hour this morning, even before

"The winged choristers began
To chirp their matins."

Elephantine not that it was large, but this designated for the reason that the guests witnessed the unloading of the elephant's trunks from the cars. Her guests were with her all night.

—The circus has somewhat demoralized the printing office today, and it has been impossible to coral the printers and keep them at the cases, which accounts for the scarcity of local in the paper tonight. But it is all right anyway. Nobody will have time to read a newspaper tonight. Everybody will be at the circus. Besides the printing office was no worse demoralized than the circuit court, which for the time-being has become a sort of circus court. It was impossible this morning to collect witnesses, jurymen, lawyers or court officers, so court adjourned till there should be more—or less—of a show. Even the dignified grand jurors made a grand stampede.

—Replying to our remarks regarding the failure of strangers from Sterling in securing admission to our milk and shoe factories, the Sterling Standard says:

"If Mr. Page, or the managers of the Henderson Shoe factory, or Brother Shaw, of the TELEGRAPH, or all of them, will come down to Sterling, we will guarantee that by applying at the office they will be permitted to visit every department of the Keystone Manufacturing Company, an establishment of such magnitude that the Henderson and Anglo Swiss would not be missed out of it. And yet Mr. Galt and his associates have never found it necessary to exclude redutable visitors."

There is nothing strange in this apparently liberal proposition. If Messrs. Diller or Barrett, of the Standard; Thomas Galt, of the Keystone factory; "or all of them" will come up to Dixon "we will guarantee that by applying" at the offices they will be admitted into our factories. In the same spirit you proclaim for Mr. Galt, our managers "never found it necessary to exclude reputable visitors." All they ask is to be assured that the visitors are reputable. However, is it true, as you state, that the Keystone is so much greater than our Anglo-Swiss and Henderson Companies? Bless you, neighbor; your Keystone manufacturing concern compares with the Anglo-Swiss Condensed Milk Company about as one of those little toy Noah's Ark wooden elephant menageries compares with Barnum's greatest show on earth.

THE ELECTRIC LIBRARIAN.

How Books Are Handled by Machinery In Boston Library.

There are many remarkable things about the new Boston library, of which the most novel is the method of conveying the books between the main desk and the bookcases on the various floors.

It was early in the work of building the library that the problem of book transportation presented itself for solution. In the old library, vacated, a score or more boys were employed, their duty being to run to all parts of the building for the books required. Under the new order of things about five times more work would have to be done, which meant an army of boys, each one of whom might have to tramp from eight to ten miles a day.

A local company was called upon to design and construct a mechanical system suited to the requirements of the service. They designed a system by which an attendant on the floor has only to pick out the book wanted, put it in a railway car with a cable attachment, push it off the side switch to the main line, from whence it runs round at the rate of 500 feet a minute to a special elevator, which drops automatically, as soon as the car is in position, down to the delivery room, waits till the empty car rolls back and then delivers it on a return track to the switch it started from.

For the accommodation of the hundreds of thousands of volumes there are six stories, or stacks, as they are technically called, of books. According to this arrangement, the delivery room, which opens on to the main reading room, although on the second floor front, occupies a position between the fourth and fifth stacks.

The aim of the designers was to focus all the books toward this one place, and as a first step they constructed an elevator well, long and narrow. This pierced the entire building from basement to roof, running by the stacks and delivery room. In this way they set up shafts for three elevators, one for each stack. The delivery room is between the fifth and sixth stacks, and two distinct elevator motions had to be provided for, the one from the fifth and sixth stacks going down, while the ones from the first, second, third and fourth went up to the room. In the basement a ten horse-power motor has been installed to haul the elevators, which it does very satisfactorily. Then there had to be constructed a railway around the building. A miniature track with an eight inch gauge and following the lines of the interior courtyard was built. The cars are made of wire and travel 500 feet a minute, with 10 to 30 pounds weight of books in them. At certain points are switches working automatically, by means of which the cars are diverted to whatever part of the building or different floors they may be required. There are 18 stations along the track, so arranged that certain cars stop at their own assigned depots and at no other. The same company constructed the pneumatic tube system, by means of which cards, tickets and other messages are dispatched to any desired point and returned by the same route. This apparatus is operated by the same motor.—Electrical Engineer.

JOSEPH TIMBLER.

An Incident In the Life of a Man of Punctilious Habits.

"Speaking of punctiliousness," said Colonel Calliper, "you remember my telling you some time ago about a man who was so particular about his dress that at a watering place where he was staying, the tide happening to serve after 6 o'clock, he went clamming in evening dress? That seemed like carrying things to extremes, but I knew a much more remarkable case than that—the case of my friend, Joseph Timbler of Storkville Centre, Vt.

"Mr. Timbler always wore evening dress wherever he might be—at home or abroad—after 6 o'clock. There was indeed a period of a month or two in summer, after the Fourth of July and until the latter part of August, when, punctilious as he was, he considered it all right to wear an informal costume at home, but he never did this abroad at any season, and at home, as August waned and September drew near, he put on evening dress again.

"In the course of time Mr. Timbler's health failed somewhat, and the doctors prescribed for him a long sea voyage. He sailed from New York for a trip around the Horn to San Francisco. Aboard ship, as everywhere else, he wore evening dress after 6 o'clock. There was no other passenger, but he always appeared at the evening meal in evening attire. Down through the tropics, into the low latitudes and round into the Pacific day after day and week after week it was always the same in all sorts of weather, and after supper, if the weather permitted, Mr. Timbler sat on deck in his swallowtail coat and broad expanse of shirt front and smoked his evening cigar, an object of great interest to the silent sailor at the wheel.

"In the Pacific the ship that Mr. Timbler sailed on was wrecked. For days she was waterlogged and unmanageable, but the captain clung to her till the last with the hope that he might yet save her or that help would come. But the time came when they had to leave her. The longboat, equipped and provisioned, had been kept ready, and when at last longer delay was impossible the captain gave the order to leave the ship. It was after 6 o'clock, and Mr. Timbler stepped over the rail into his place in the longboat in evening dress.

"For days they floated on the ocean, and at last their provisions gave out. Then for days they starved, and then they drew lots to see who should die. The lot fell to Mr. Timbler. It was noon when the lots were drawn. The killing was set for 6 o'clock. Lots had been drawn for this task, too, and at 6 o'clock the sailor upon whom the lot had fallen came aft, knife in hand, to where Mr. Timbler sat. For once Mr. Timbler was not in evening dress at the hour, though when he saw the sailor approach he knew that the hour had come when he ought to be. He asked for time to dress. He had accepted the lot without a murmur, but he didn't like to be killed in morning costume.

"The sailor carried his request forward, and after a brief conversation it was decided to give Mr. Timbler time. As a matter of fact, Mr. Timbler had been liked aboard the ship both forward and aft. Notwithstanding his punctiliousness in the matter of dress, he could look a gale in the eye, and he was not afraid of salt water. So it was felt that this courtesy was due him, and the sailor went back and told him he would have time to dress. Mr. Timbler was as deliberate as he was precise, and it does not seem altogether improbable that on this occasion he was perhaps rather more deliberate than usual. He came to the end at last, but while he was arranging his tie and the man who was waiting for him was sharpening his knife on the gunwale a shout was heard from forward:

"'A sail! A sail!'"—New York Sun.

ELECTRICAL HEAT.

Some of the Advantages of Its Use For Warming Residences.

A current of electricity always heats the conductor through which it goes. The conversion into heat of the electrical energy is always complete. There is no loss, as in most other transformations, and in a given conductor the heating effect increases as the square of the current, so that twice the current gives four times as much heat, three times the current nine times the heat, and so on. It therefore becomes possible to produce almost any desirable temperature even to that of fusion of an electric conductor, while the most refractory substances are either fused or volatilized by the heat of an electric arc which has the temperature of about 6,000 degrees F.

A constant current will maintain a constant temperature. How much heat shall be produced and what the temperature shall be are only questions of apparatus, and regulation is as easy as turning a switch. Electrical heating for household purposes is therefore as feasible as heating for welding iron bars or fusing alumina. Houses may be thus heated as easily and as safely as they are lighted by electricty. It has often been talked about, but the inquiries have generally been discouraged by exaggerated notions of its relative cost. The implication has always been that people always choose the cheaper article, which is not true.

For instance, a Rochester lamp may give a light of 30 candles for six hours by burning a quart of coal oil costing 2 cents. The same amount of light from an incandescent electric lamp will cost as much as 10 cents. Nevertheless there are thousands who choose its other good qualities are considered a sufficient offset for the greater cost. Ordinary furnaces for heating houses are not half so economical as individual stoves, but no one uses the latter who can contrive to pay for the former. So in matters of convenience the cost of a thing is not the first item.

The convenience of electrical heaters in a house, their cleanliness and the simplicity of their regulation commend themselves to every one, and when these are fairly apprehended by the well to do class it is certain that such electrical appliances will be demanded, and hot air and other furnaces will be abandoned, and with them will go the nuisances of handling coal and ashes, the consequent dust and gases, the smoky chimneys, the dangerous flues, the preparing of kindling and the expert care of the furnace with its drafts and registers.

There will be increased safety from fires, and the cost of insurance will be less. When the cost and trouble of these are set over against the cost, the convenience, the safety of electric heat, the difference will not be found to be so great, but it will be willingly borne by large numbers in most communities. Once this method has a fair start it is certain to be adopted as widely as the electric light has been and then will soon be as indispensable.—Cosmopolitan.

Long Life of Wood.

The durability of wet timber is something remarkable. Recently, according to a Vienna paper, one of the piles supporting the bridge built across the Danube by the Emperor Trajan was taken up. Although driven 17 centuries ago, it showed no change save that it was petrified to the depth of three-quarters of an inch.

The chestnut, beech, elm and oak piles on which stand the Savoy palace, London, are undecayed. They were put in place in the latter part of the thirteenth century.—New York World.

—A wagon load of emigrants passed through the city this morning. They say they are bound for America, and that they were desirous of learning the nearest road to Dixon.—Sterling Standard.

Probably they had an idea when they got into Sterling that they had got out of America.
